

Using short-time working for industrial companies affected by the energy crisis

In order to maintain employment and avoid redundancies in the context of the energy crisis, the Conjoncture Committee approved the use of short-time working for industrial companies that would be obliged to reduce or even stop production following a government decision imposing a reduction in gas consumption or even load shedding.

In addition, industrial companies that have problems maintaining production activity as a result of problems upstream or downstream of their production will be able to have recourse to unemployment from a cyclical source.

Moreover, as is already the case, all industrial enterprises wishing to resort to partial unemployment must submit their application before the 12th day of the month preceding the recourse to partial unemployment, even if it is only for preventive purposes.

The information published in this article is valid only on the date of publication of said article. As social legislation is frequently amended, please contact us concerning any question or intended use based on this article or a previously published article.

Pursuant to Article 2, §2 of the Act of 10 August 1991, as the Legal Department of SECUREX Luxembourg SA is not authorised to practice law, it shall limit its action at all times to disseminating information and documentation.

Such documentation and information thus provided under the legal subscription always constitute typical examples or summaries, are of indicative value, and lay no claim to being exhaustive. The addressee is solely responsible for the use and interpretation of the information or documentation referred to in this article, advice or acts he deduces as well as the results he obtains from them.